

From left to right: Gweneth Maame Oware, Jasmine Owusu Agyemang, Bawah Bashiru, Georgette Tachie and Mikayla Amadin

She was optimistic that the graduate will excel in the next phase of their academic and beyond given that they have demonstrated their commitment to education in various forms even at such a young age. She encouraged them to chase after their dreams to become prominent persons in the society.

Each of the young graduates received a certificate and an honorary handshake from the ex Minister and Diplomat. They also had fun cutting a graduation cake and mingling with their parents and friends after the ceremony.

Daddy Day Care was established in 2007 and has since graduated 15 children into various schools in Ghana and abroad. The school is located at East Legon behind PH Hotel and operates on a mission to give children a unique and solid foundation to prepare them for the future.

daddy DayCare 3RD GRADUATION

In a glamorous and colourful ceremony last Saturday, Daddy Day Care, one of the most recognized nursery schools in East Legon, offering quality education, graduated five of its pupils unto the next phase of their academic journey.

The five graduates; Gweneth Maame Oware, Jasmine Owusu Agyemang, Bawah Bashiru, Georgette Tachie and Mikayla Amadin who were all smiles during the ceremony, dazzled guests with an astounding advocate for a peaceful election. Mimicking the 2012 presidential candidates, each of them wore a representative attire of the various political parties in the country and joined hands to beautifully preach the message of peace. Coupled with a number of incredible choreography and poetry recitals the kids had an exciting time dancing and singing to the admiration of their parents and invited guests. Prominent among their dance moves was the all-popular azonto dance.

The Guest Speaker for the ceremony, Hon Hackman Owusu Agyeman who appeared astonished by the performances of the children, challenged government to recognize and support such institutions aimed at building a solid foundation for future leaders. On behalf of the Board of Directors and staff of the school, the former Diplomat and Minister for Interior presented the proprietress of the school, Mrs. Irene Ayesu with a plaque of recognition for a good work done. He urged her to continue with the good works, adding that the academic foundation of children cannot be compromised by any institution.

A cross section of parents and invited guests

Mrs. Ayesu in her speech urged the kids to "go on, keep learning and most importantly continue to make Daddy Day Care proud". She added that through their training in the school, the graduates are opened to unique opportunities that some older generations did not have and therefore advised them to take advantage of such opportunities and learn hard. As BB King said, "the beautiful thing about education is that no one can take it away from you".

The teaching staff

The five graduates cutting the graduation cake to usher-in their beautiful future

The pupils wowing the audience with a spectacular azonto dance performance

The graduates receiving certificates from the Guest Speaker, Hon. Hackman Owusu Agyeman

Mrs Irene Ayesu, proprietress of Daddy Day Care School receiving a recognition plaque from Hon. Hackman Owusu Agyeman on behalf of the board of directors and staff of the school

The children showing excitement at the arrival of Kwame Sefa Kayi, the MC of the ceremony

The five graduates advocating for peace